

CEOAS Emeritus Faculty Policy

Emeritus faculty are a valuable resource to the College of Earth, Ocean, and Atmospheric Sciences. Their long experience in research and education, their contacts with funding agencies and international colleagues, and their accumulated knowledge of ocean and atmosphere processes are especially valuable to younger faculty. Moreover, many emeritus faculty maintain active research programs after their official retirement. Thus it is in the interest of CEOAS to provide some support for those emeritus faculty who wish to maintain contact with their CEOAS colleagues. However, this interest must also be balanced with the overall fiscal and physical resources of the College.

In recognition of their extensive service to the College, those emeritus faculty who have served as either Associate Dean or Dean of the College are exempt from the following provisions of this policy.

Office Space Office space will be made available as needed for emeritus faculty who have funded research programs. For emeritus faculty who no longer maintain funded programs, office space may be made available on a case by case basis through consultation with and at the discretion of the Dean. Such arrangements will be reviewed regularly, and continuance is at the discretion of the Dean.

Facilities and Services Use of College facilities and services, such as copying, mailing, mailboxes, office supplies, secretarial support, etc., are available only to emeritus faculty who have funded research programs or, at the discretion of the Dean, to emeritus faculty who have been provided office space in CEOAS facilities. Emeritus faculty who are not in either one of these categories may not use CEOAS resources, and they should make arrangements to have their mail forwarded to their personal address. Exceptions may be made with the approval of the Dean.

Research Computer System Emeritus faculty with funded research programs can obtain a personal account on the College RCS at the normal rate. Members of their research groups (if any) will continue to be charged at the regular rate. Other emeritus faculty can obtain an RCS account through consultation with and at the discretion of the Dean.
